

New York City recently released proposed pay regulations that could negatively impact your flexibility on platforms like DoorDash. The NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protections needs to hear from Dashers just like you today!

Take Action Now

Right now, New York City is considering pay regulations for food delivery workers. DoorDash is not opposed to the establishment of reasonable minimum pay standards for the industry. In fact, we have advocated for the adoption of a reasonable minimum pay standard in California and other parts of the country when paired with other important factors that protect Dasher independence.

Unfortunately, the City's proposed pay regulations encourage platforms like DoorDash to restrict workers' ability to choose which deliveries they accept or when they work – flexibility that we know you value. The proposal

