

Cars and limos and vans often stop in front of this restaurant in the bike lane, letting people out. Even though there is no outdoor shed, there are outdoor platforms where people dine. This allows the windows from this restaurant to remain open til late at night, and music blasts [and i mean blasts] out into the street. People gather outside blocking any pathway and forcing people into the bike lane/street. Even after the place closes down —weekends after 1230am [although sometimes they remain open until later], people gather outside sometimes for over an hour. And cars wait around, sometimes double parked or in the bike lane, waiting—- waiting— waiting—- to pick up their fares. Then the last insults, tables, chairs [some set out in front of the neighboring building to allow more room inside for people to gather, to sing, to dance] are brought inside and the trash is put outside. Sometimes the staff continues to play amplified music while they are doing this.
