

Open Streets invites public intoxication and disrespectful behavior - Vomit in front of a Chinese funeral home

NYPD vehicle weaving around Open Streets Barricades. Per 2024 Open Streets Rules - Partner Businesses are required to move barricades for emergency access

Massive crowds of 500+ people on two blocks of residential Canal Street, every night, 7 days a week

DOT has turned low-income, immigrant Chinatown into a 'Bourbon Street' - creating an unregulated party atmosphere that attracts amplified sound performers, food trucks, and unpermitted block parties drawn to the massive crowds drinking and smoking in the streets

No added services to accomodate hundreds of additional visitors - leading public urination, increased trash, increase in rodents

Open Streets on Canal is well known for its lack of enforcement and oversight. This type of behavior (illegally parked car in the closed off street, open container drinking, blasting music) is typical and recurring.
